Gr 1-5 • This colorful recipe book encourages children to eat a rainbow of vegetables for diverse nutritional benefits. Recipes are organized by food color, and each includes step-by-step instructions with appetizing full-color photos that break up the instructions into manageable bites. The introduction covers equipment, a few foods, and basic preparation skills for items such as ginger, avocado, and garlic. Some difficult steps require grown-up assistance for younger cooks, but a reliance on store-bought crusts and doughs makes the recipes accessible for those new to the kitchen. The inclusion of food facts (for instance, eggplants are really large berries) keeps this title educational. VERDICT Libraries will want to find a place for this collection of fun eats for young vegetarian cooks with adventurous palettes. — Heather Acerro, Rochester Public Library, MN

Fun & easy to follow. My 8-year-old niece was SO excited to start cooking!

My grand daughter loves it.

A little too simplistic for my granddaughter on her 8th birthday. Might be great as a learning tool for younger children.

I bought this book to help teach my intellectually disabled son better nutrition. It's well written, has great visuals and I really like the way it is set up by colors. It's a fun way to teach nutrition and even though he is an adult it's not too much of a "baby" book . I like the variety of recipes and that all of the ingredients are easy to find he is really enjoying it. I'd recommend this book for kids of all ages and also young adults.

My granddaughters couldn't wait to try the recipes in the book. Very helpful for kids that don't like vegetables.
