Synopsis

The quintessentially English cricket commentator, writer, oenophile, bon viveur, collector and national treasure, fondly known as "Blowers", tells his riveting life story. Born in Norfolk and educated at Eton and Cambridge, Henry Calthorpe Blofeld OBE, nicknamed "Blowers" by the late Brian Johnston, is best known as a cricket commentator for Test Match Special on BBC Radio 4 and BBC Radio 5 Live Sports Extra. His distinctively rich, cut glass voice and his vividly eccentric observations of life on and off the pitch, have made him a household name, not only in Britain but around the world, wherever cricket is played. Blowers has been close to the heart of the game for over fifty years and his career has taken him to the far corners of the earth. This autobiography, stuffed to the gunwhales with delicious anecdotes, brings his astonishingly colourful story bang up to date.

Customer Reviews

A delightful read from one of England's greatest cricket commentators. Coming from a public school background, I could easily identify with Henry's early life. His insights into other commentators, players, and places he has been, were an absolute pleasure to read. The "road trip" towards the end of the book was very funny too. One thing that I really did like about this book was that it wasn't over political, or (dare I say it), "bitchy" towards players and most of all, management. Buy this book. If you love old school cricket, you will love this.
