

The book was found

Write Your Own Fairy Tale: The New Rules For Dating, Relationships, And Finding Love On Your Terms

Synopsis

Real Housewives of New Jersey's Siggy Flicker knows that happily-ever-after isn't a guarantee. You have to work for it. Smart and sassy relationship expert Siggy Flicker is your new fairy godmother. Having matched more than a thousand couples and embraced her own second chance at love, she knows finding a prince is no picnic. Now she's sharing the keys to building a fairy-tale romance, beginning with a honest assessment of what you really want to be happy. To help readers create the healthy, lasting relationships they deserve, Siggy is sharing her honest, empowering advice, including:

- Define the relationship you want. Set an intention and true love will follow.
- Forget what looks good on paper.
- Sure he's Mr. Right, but is he right for you?
- Take a break from your dating rut with a Dating Detox. Step back and reevaluate your dating behavior.
- Learn how to make the most of the first five minutes. First impressions are important, so learn to send the right signals.
- Happily ever after means forever. Continue to work hard to keep your relationship strong and passionate.

In Write Your Own Fairy Tale, readers will get a tried-and-true comprehensive guide to the first six months of dating and Siggy's exclusive plan to get over heartbreak ensuring you'll get from agony to over it in just six simple steps. Featuring practical exercises, real-life success stories, and lessons Siggy learned the hard way, Write Your Own Fairy Tale is a wake-up call for everyone looking for love and a guide for making sure you get the happiness you truly deserve.

Book Information

Paperback: 240 pages

Publisher: Berkley (September 29, 2015)

Language: English

ISBN-10: 0451476239

ISBN-13: 978-0451476234

Product Dimensions: 5.4 x 0.6 x 8.2 inches

Shipping Weight: 12.6 ounces (View shipping rates and policies)

Average Customer Review: 4.9 out of 5 stars 59 customer reviews

Best Sellers Rank: #49,578 in Books (See Top 100 in Books) #34 in Books > Self-Help > Relationships > Mate Seeking #97 in Books > Self-Help > Relationships > Dating #310 in Books > Self-Help > Self-Esteem

Customer Reviews

Siggy Flicker is a relationship expert, professional matchmaker, and TV personality whose professional opinion has been sought out by a variety of TV programs, syndicated radio shows, and publications throughout the country. She is a contributor to Marie Claire and appears regularly on The Wendy Williams Show, the Today show, Dr. Phil, and Access Hollywood, among others. Siggy is also a new addition to the cast of Bravo's Real Housewives of New Jersey. She lives in New Jersey with her husband and children.

INTRODUCTION
Once upon a Time . . . THERE WAS you. A sassy, funny, kind, smart, beautiful everyday princess looking for love. After a lifetime of Disney movies, Meg Ryan rom coms and your friends' adorable meet cute stories, you're wondering if you're cursed when it comes to romance. Maybe you just got out of a long relationship, or you're exhausted from dating a string of men who just won't commit, or you haven't been on a date in too many months to count. If you spend one more Friday night ordering carryout and watching Law and Order: SVU, or RSVP solo to one more wedding or have one more person ask you why you're still single, you're going to lose your mind. You're fixated on one pressing question: where is my happily ever after?? Poof! Cue dramatic entrance of your very own relationship fairy godmother "yours truly! For essentially my entire life, I've been an advice guru, matchmaker and relationship expert. Even when I was very young, people sought me out for relationship advice. I wasn't the prettiest girl in middle school or high school (just pull out one of my yearbooks to confirm that!), but I did have a certain X factor that made guys flock to me and girls (even the popular ones) want to know my secret. The truth was, there wasn't much of a secret; I just always had a big personality and a knack for connecting with people. I intuitively understood how relationships work and how and why people connect. Through the years I loved playing cupid but even more I enjoyed dishing out the best advice. I was the love guru throughout my college years at Monmouth University with people lining up for my advice, both male and female. I worked my way through college by waiting tables at TGIFridays and I became the on-site love guru for all of my coworkers, who came to me with their romantic problems on a regular basis. And my coworkers weren't the only ones. My section at the restaurant would always be packed with regular customers who often ordered up my advice with their appetizers! Along with dishing out wisdom, I would always set up my work friends. In fact, TGIFridays is where I set up my very first couple who got married "my coworkers Chris and Amy, who are now celebrating their twenty-first wedding anniversary. Once I got married and moved to a new state and new town it didn't take long for all the moms I met at Mommy and Me to start sharing their relationship troubles and seeking my advice. Soon, word was out and friends of friends would call me up and ask for my time and advice.

I loved every second of it. I found myself not only good at giving advice but getting passionate about people's stories and following up with those who reached out. Every single time, every single person would be amazed at how much I remembered and the fact that I was checking in. It became a side job for me but didn't feel like one. Then a few years later after my divorce, I met Lara, a recruiter at a company called Model Quality Introductions (MQI), a matchmaking service. I was living in Florida at the time, and she approached me one night at a restaurant with an offer to set me up with one of their clients. But I was much less intrigued by the offer to be set up than I was by what she did for a living. When I moved to New York a year later, I learned that MQI was hiring a new matchmaker for the Tri-State area and I decided I wanted the job. Actually, I decided I HAD to have that job. I went to an interview at the Waldorf Astoria and "I remember it like it was yesterday" the room was filled with thirty-six other people being considered for the position. I sized up the competition, took a deep breath and went in to sell myself to Craig, the owner of the company, and his wife. I explained to them that I had been matchmaking since I was in elementary school. I described my history setting people up and how I intuitively understood what makes two people click. I told them how passionate I was about helping people find love and how much I enjoyed it. I was even helping out my friend Jennifer, who at the time was director of a dating service called It's Just Lunch, suggesting connections between her clients. I should have invoiced her for the free labor, but truth is, I loved doing it so much that I was happy to help her out. The more I talked, the more excited I became and the more convinced I was this was the perfect job for me. I guess I convinced Craig too, because a few weeks later he called to tell me the job was mine. From day one, my career at MQI was exactly as wonderful and fulfilling as I'd imagined! People always ask me what my secret to success when it comes to matchmaking is and it's hard to pin down because so much of it comes from a gut instinct. I describe it as almost like a sixth sense. But beyond that I believe it comes down to a few key things. I listen to people very carefully and can interpret what they're saying and, even more important, what they're not saying, when it comes to what they are looking for. So when a woman tells me, "I just don't meet any guys," I hear, "I just don't want to make an effort to put myself out there." I cut through the bullshit, but in a loving way. My clients always know that I genuinely care about them and will work tirelessly to help them realize their romantic goals. They understand I am rooting for them and that helps them keep the faith and have an open mind. That's half the battle when it comes to love. Also, I am very, very specific and very, very honest about what people should say and do to make their relationship or love connection work. And my advice works. The stats prove it: more than one hundred marriages on my watch, and counting! After leaving MQI, I continued to work as a matchmaker on

New Jersey, struggling to pay her student loans and other bills, could only dream of. I was also hearing the ticktock of my biological clock and knew Mark would make a great dad and be able to provide for our family. So, I was thrilled when we started dating and beyond thrilled when he shocked me a year later with a fancy new cherry red Mercedes and an even bigger surprise: a beautiful pear-shaped engagement ring tucked in the glove box. Our wedding day had all the elements of a dream come true: hundreds of family and friends gathering on a sunny April day on Long Island. I was bursting with happiness in my gorgeous ivory mermaid-cut strapless dress, which made me feel like a princess. The song Mark and I swayed to for our first dance was "Finally Found Someone" (oh boy). But cheesy wedding songs aside, we were on our way to happy ever after, or so I thought. Turns out, my so-called fairy tale became anything but. It was quickly apparent that Mark and I actually weren't that well suited for each other. He was looking for a pretty little trophy wife, someone delicate and quiet for his arm, someone who would be a terrific supporting player, not some loud, out-there, bull-in-a-china-shop kind of woman. It's hard to believe that I could convince anyone that I was a soft-spoken little doll of a wife, but I played the part when I met Mark, and we both wanted to believe that was who I was. Mark fell for my act, and I think I did, too. I felt I could be that person if I just kept trying. I wanted Mark to love me because being loved is the most amazing feeling in the world. So, I kept pretending, thinking all I had to do was keep trying harder. And harder. And harder. During our marriage we had two beautiful children. That generous man gave me everything he could buy with his Visa. He put sexy new cars in the garage and couture in the closet. We lived in a gorgeous, sprawling Palm Beach home, and quite simply, we had everything we could dream of. But the woman Mark was in love with wasn't me. It was a Siggy I pretended to be specifically for him. It was almost as if he had never met the real me. And as time went on and the real me began to emerge, Mark and I both realized something: he wasn't as keen on that Siggy. But I couldn't be someone I wasn't and I couldn't ignore the lonely feelings that threatened to overwhelm me. And yet, Mark and I had made a commitment to each other, one I took very seriously. And we had kids together and a very nice lifestyle. Also, I'll admit it: I was terrified of the unknown and being on my own. Which is all to say it wasn't easy to imagine uprooting our lives and ending a nine-year marriage. At the same time, I knew as clear as I've known anything that I couldn't stay married to Mark. Once we were able to finally face what our marriage truly was, we both felt a sense of relief. Walking away from my marriage was the hardest thing I've ever done. But I tried to handle the end of our marriage with love and kindness and respect. It wasn't Mark's fault and I didn't want animosity to cloud our divorce and not just for the kids' sakes, which granted was important but because deep down I loved Mark and wanted the end of our marriage to reflect the affection and admiration we've always had for each other. Mark and I didn't have a great marriage, but we did have a great divorce, and I'm happy to report we're still friends. I still love him and want the best for him. In fact, my ex-husband, Mark, was the best man at my wedding to my current husband, Michael. I set my ex up on plenty of dates when I was a matchmaker in NYC and eventually he found love on his own in the lobby of his building with his current his fiancée, Thuy! They are perfect for each other, and knowing that he found a woman that truly is his match makes me happy. We spend time together as a family with our children, and Mark, Thuy, Michael and I enjoy vacationing together. We're very proud of how we've handled things—I call it a divorce done right. But it wasn't always so easy. In the weeks and months after Mark and I separated, as relieved as I was to be free of my unhappy marriage, I was also fragile and sad. I wanted another chance at love and believed I deserved happy ever after, but it's scary when everything you've known changes. Which is probably why I accepted another marriage proposal on the day my divorce was final! About six months after Mark and I separated, I started dating a longtime friend. He, like Mark, was eager to sweep me off my feet. This relationship was so different from my marriage to Mark. I always felt that I wasn't appreciated enough in my marriage or that who I was wasn't good enough. I was too loud. I was too over the top. With this new relationship I was with a friend who just adored me and accepted me. The problem was my feelings were not strong enough for him. I didn't like him in a romantic way. I adored him for wanting to love me but the truth was I didn't feel the same way about him. He wasn't the right guy for me either. But, coming at such a vulnerable time in my life, I can see now how I got swept up in the moment. Luckily I came to my senses and called off the engagement almost as quickly as it had come. Throughout this tumultuous period, I had to do some serious soul-searching. What I had always wanted for my life—financial security, a handsome husband, a picture-perfect love affair—turned out not to be what I needed. I had to figure out what I was really looking for and what kind of life and person would make me happy. Never one to wallow or focus on failure or regret, I licked my wounds, focused on my kids, hung out with my good friends and got my head back in the game. When I was at a restaurant/bar in New Jersey with my best friend, Jen, a few months later and I met Michael, a cute car salesman who would become my husband, I was in a much different place. I was ready to believe in love and myself again. Where Mark was practically perfect on paper, Michael was not. He was going through a divorce himself, had just lost his business and was beyond broke. And he lived over one thousand miles away! Not ideal to say the least. But as Michael and I got to know each other none of that mattered. What did matter was that he was kind, that he made me laugh and that he loved me, the real me, with every one of my flaws, unconditionally. He is, without a doubt, the love of my life, my soul mate, the relationship I dreamed I would one day have. So, what went right with Michael after things went so wrong with Mark? I learned that my fairy tale was different than I thought it would be, and that was okay. I was so focused on the fantasy in my head of what my life should be, that I missed the warning signs. I wanted the ideal, and that came at the expense of reality. I was so focused on looking for one thing, that I missed out on other possibilities. And I twisted myself into a pretzel to try to make it work because I wanted so badly for this to be the happy ending of my story. The irony is, doing that ensured that it would be anything but! It wasn't until I figured out who I really was and what I wanted, and made a conscious effort to be more open, that I found the person (and the life) that suits me to a tee. It was a hard one, but a precious experience. There were a lot of tears involved. So I am here to save you from wasting time (and Kleenex) making the same mistakes. No matter where you are in your love life at this moment, I'm going to help you find the relationship you want, on your own terms. How? I'm going to offer you honest advice and straight talk. I'm going to guide you through an honest assessment of what you might be doing wrong or could be doing better (because hey, if your fairy godmother can't offer some tough love, who can?). I'm going to help you think really hard about what you want from your life, what you want your story to be and how your future partner fits into that. So get out your favorite pen, because there will be writing. The exercises I've created in these pages are designed for you to drill deeply into what you are looking for (not your best friend, your next-door neighbor or even your mom) when it comes to life and love. And I am going to share illuminating Q&As and stories from other women's friends, clients, and even strangers who have reached out to me at weddings, in line at the grocery store, on social media who've been just where you are. But most of all, I want to give you a hell of a pep talk. This last part is especially important. Because I know it's no fun to be single. There's no shame in wanting a good guy, someone to ask you about your day, to save you the last spoonful of cookie dough ice cream, and, let's be honest, to change the oil in the car. You don't have to feel pathetic or ashamed or superficial. But no more crying in your pillow, sweet pea. We're going to fix this right up and in no time at all you're going to be one of those envied women who seem lit from within, have an unassailable confidence and optimism when it comes to men and dating, and is fully prepared to find and enjoy lasting love. In the meantime, you're going to live your best life, follow your passions and hobbies, and get to know and love yourself so when you meet your guy, you're the best and happiest YOU you can be. And the best part? When you meet him that irresistible, complicated, delicious yin to your yangâ "itâ ™s not the end of the story. Itâ ™s just the beginning.

This book has it all- great advice served up with humor and grit. Through this book Siggy helps engage the reader with straight forward advice and examples from her own experiences. I have read a lot of self help books and this is the first one that once I started reading, I could not put it down. This is one that you will want to read again and again.

I love Siggy's advice on the Wendy William's show. This is a sweet, lighthearted little book and a good reminder not to give up on love. Siggy gives a lot of advice about focusing on yourself. It's a great confidence book and one that I would recommend to friends after a break up.

I love this book! This is a real "wing woman" book written with true passion & a deep appreciation for the magic a loving relationship can bring. Siggy gives it straight on how to find true love & how to ultimately keep onto it once found. Siggy guides us step by step to be smart, brave, strong & classy ladies in our relationships. I really appreciated the honesty & the "cute meet" situations given throughout the book. I found myself laughing out loud saying "OMG that's me" or " oh I remember that" - I couldn't put this book down. We all need rules & a bit of tough love & Siggy calls it out & pulls it all together in this very well written book. Have highly recommended this book as a must read to all my friends- guys & gals. My new bible on relationships & dating. Be yourself & stay classy Siggy style "I love it!"

Love this book! Siggy Flicker is amazing and she is spot on with her insight! I was lucky enough to meet her at a book signing and I had already purchased the book from and she was just happy I was benefiting from her book. She isn't all about they money like most of the RHWONJ, she signed my book & took time one on one to talk with me! This is a MUST read! I highly recommend it!

I loved this book so much I read it in a few hours. As a certified Lifestyle Coach I will recommend it to all my clients and friends. It is loaded with feel good advice for all ages! It is a confidence boasting, fun, inspiring read. Siggy's book can turn anyones "lonely, single" life into a fun journey that will lead to true love. I loved reading her husband, Michael's interpretation of what guys really want as well. They are a "real life" fairytale!

It's an awesome great and an amazing book wish I would of know about this way before I got married the first time now I'm in a second marriage but I love it and now pay attention more to everything

Siggy is brilliant! I really enjoyed reading this and found this book to be very informative.

You can read the faith she has in love through her words. Everything you needed a fairy godmother to tell you... straight up!!

Download to continue reading...

Write Your Own Fairy Tale: The New Rules for Dating, Relationships, and Finding Love On Your Terms
The Dance Fairies Boxed Set (7 Books) (Rainbow Magic, #1: Bethany the Ballet Fairy; #2: Jade the Disco Fairy; #3: Rebecca the Rock 'n' Roll Fairy; #4: Tasha the Tap Dance Fairy; #5: Jessica the Jazz Fairy; #6: Serena the Salsa Fairy; #7: Isabelle the Ice Dance Fairy)
Gay Dating Success: Finding Real Love and Intimacy In a Straight World (Real Love, Sex, Finding Women, Finding Men Book 1)
Polyamory: The Practical Dater's Guide to the Pursuit and Maintenance of Open Relationships (Polyamory, Polyamorous, Relationship, Dating, Poly Relationship, Polyamory Dating, Open Relationships)
The Victorian Fairy Tale Book (The Pantheon Fairy Tale and Folklore Library)
The Twisted Fairy Tale Box Set, Books 1-3 (A Twisted Fairy Tale Book 0)
All In One: Part 1,2,3 & 4 -- Write a Detective Novel, Write a Good Mystery, Red Herrings, Hiding & Finding the Clues: Help With Writing A Detective Novel (Write Me Dearly)
Not Your Mother's Rules: The New Secrets for Dating (The Rules)
Conscious Dating: Finding the Love of Your Life & the Life That You Love
Fairy Companions Coloring Book - Fairy Romance, Dragons and Fairy Pets (Fantasy Art Coloring by Selina) (Volume 4)
Chinese Fairy Tales and Fantasies (The Pantheon Fairy Tale and Folklore Library)
Russian Fairy Tales (The Pantheon Fairy Tale and Folklore Library)
The Dharma of The Princess Bride: What the Coolest Fairy Tale of Our Time Can Teach Us About Buddhism and Relationships
Lacey the Little Mermaid Fairy: A Rainbow Magic Book (The Fairy Tale Fairies #7)
Forbidden Adult Fairy Tales: A Sexy Explicit Fantasy Bundle (Violation Innocence Historical Fairy Tale)
The New Rules for Love, Sex, and Dating Finding Your Fairy Tale Ending (Girls Living 4 God)
Men Don't Love Women Like You!: The Brutal Truth About Dating, Relationships, and How to Go from Placeholder to Game Changer
How to Get Your Ex Back Fast! Toy with the Male Psyche and Get Him Back with Skills only a Dating Coach Knows (Relationship and Dating Advice for Women Book 4)
Internet Dating 101: It's Complicated . . . But It Doesn't Have To Be: The Digital Age Guide to Navigating Your Relationship Through Social Media and Online Dating Sites

Contact Us

DMCA

Privacy

FAQ & Help