Borch, a cartographic publishing company from Germany, makes tough, long-lasting maps with non-toxic, environmentally responsible lamination material.

Just returned from my first trip to Beijing. I really like this map. Durable because it is laminated. Functional because it shows both English and Chinese names. When taking a taxi, just point to the spot you want to go and the Driver reads the Chinese and takes you there.

Purchased this map before going to Beijing and kept it with us during our entire trip. Although we used tour guides most days, it was nice to have, especially the subway map, when walking around by ourselves.

This is an excellent map of Beijing. I have lived and worked in Beijing. This map got a lot of use and I'd buy it again.

This is a great, durable map that has very helpful information about key sites. Most important of all, it has characters for the streets so that you can write them down for cab drivers and other people who may be helping you with directions. Highly recommended.

Nice map and easy to read.

Best map of Beijing I could find. However it is rather large and hard to open and close when traveling. Details is good but too small for senior eyes without reading glasses.

A useful map for getting around Beijing without needing to use phone internet data.

Nice, vivid map with quality laminate.
