Robin Lim lives with her family in Bali, Indonesia. She has written several articles and books of prose and poetry and is founder and executive director for the Yayasan Ibu Bumi Sehat Birth Center in Bali. Lim is also the recipient of the Alexander Langer International Peace Award.

I chose a 4 because it didn't give me information about the expensive coffee made there. Also how dog feces was a part of that coffee. Also, there is a fruit there that is not very nice smelling and looks like porcupine quills on the outside. I had to do a homemaker lesson and the book was very helpful, but then had a chance to hear someone talk about it who actually visited there so I felt like I would have liked more information. The book did have a lot of good information that I could use though.

Nice book that I plan on reading more as my daughter ages. After she'll rip the pages right now. My husband is Indonesian. I wish more resources like this were available.

Great book for second graders!
